Snowline Hospice Thrift Stores Help in Tough Times

(Diamond Springs, CA)— Tough economic times call for terrific measures. The Snowline Hospice Thrift Stores are grateful for the continuous community support that they have received over the years, effective Wednesday, February 6, all clothing prices will be reduced to provide customers additional savings.

“We wanted to do our part to let the community know that we are here for them during the hard times,” said Sharon Spangler, Cameron Park Thrift Store Manager. “We would not be able to survive without the support of the community so we want to do whatever we can do to help. Lowering our clothing prices we feel is the right move because it will allow our customers to stretch their dollars even more.”

There is always something to shop for as new donated items are added to inventory daily, no two items are the same. It is not uncommon to hear about the great deals customers get on their purchases. Each store is unique and many customers frequent all four stores for the great deals. All funds generated through the four thrift stores are applied to providing end of life care in El Dorado County and Folsom.
